When is the Time to Die!

- I asked the glad and happy child, Whose hands were filled with flowers,
- Whose silvery laugh ran free and wild, Among the vine-wreathed bowers; I crossed her sunny path, and cried,
- When is the time to die ?" "Not yet I not yet !" the child replied,
- And swiftly bounded by.
- I asked a maiden; back she threw The tresses of her hair ;
- Gricf's traces o'er her cheeks I knew, Like pearls they gilstened there; A flush passed o'er her lily brow,
- I heard her spirit eigh : Not now," she eried, "Oh, no! not now;
- Youth is no time to die !" I asked a mother, as she pressed
- Her first-born in her arms, As gently on her tender breast She hushed her babe's alarms;
- In quivering tones her accents came, Her eyes were dim with tenrs ;
- " My boy his mother's life must claim For many, many years." I questioned one in manhood's prime
- Of proud and fearless air; His brow was forrowed not by time, Or dimmed with was or care.
- In angry accents he replied, And flashed with scorn his eye :
- "Talk not to me of death," he cried. " For only age should die." I questioned age ; for him the tomb
- Had long been all prepared; But death, who withers youth and bloom, This man of years had spared. Once more his nature's dying fire
- Flashed high, and thus he cried, " Life ! only life, is my desire !" Then gasped, and grouned, and died
- I asked a Christian-" Answer thou, When is the hour of death?" A holy enlar was on his brow, And penceful was his breath :
- And sweetly o'er his features stole A smile, a light divine ; He spake the language of his soul-"My Master's time is mine "

Labor Honorabic.

The following extract from a recent letter of an English traveler, who has had the best opportunities for observations, may surprise some of our fine ladies :

I can assure you that, having lived all my life bout in the different castles and manorhouses of Great Britain, and been accustomed to the industrious habits of duchesses and countesses, I was utterly astonished at the idleness of American fine ladies. No English woman of rank, (with the exception of a few parvenues) from the Queen downwards, would remain for one half hour unemployed, or sit in a rocking chair, un-less seriously iil. They almost all (with hardly an exception) copy the letters of business of their husbands, fathers or brothers, attend minutely to the wants of the poor around them, and even take part in their amusements, and sympathize with their sorrows: visit and superintend the schools; work in their own gardens; see to their household concerns; think about their visitors; look over the weekly accounts, not only of domestic expenses, but often those of the farm and the estate; manage penny clubs in conjunction with the working classes, to help them help themselves; and with all these occupations, by early hours, they keep up their acquaintance with the literature and politics of the day, and cultivate the accomplishments of music and drawing, and often acquire besides some knowledge of scientific

The late Marchioness of Lansdowne was so well acquainted with the cottagers in her neighbor-hood, that she used to visit and look at the corpses of the dead, because she found that her doing so

I have known her shut herself up with a mad woman in her poor dwelling, who used to lock her door, and could not be induced to admit any one else. Lady Landsdowne's only daughter used one hundred guineas (given her by her father-in-law, Lord Suffolk, to buy a bracelet) to build pig-sties with his permission, at her husband's little country residence. She educates her own children without assistance, teaching the boys Latin, and the girls all the useful branches of education.

The late Duchess of Bedford, I discovered when on a visit to Woburn, had for thirty years of her married life risen at 6 o'clock, summer and winter, lit her own fire, made some ten for the Duke | Waishna, Onhu, Denier in General Merchandise, Country Pro and herself, and then, as he wrote his own letters of business, she copied them, and they came down to a large party of guests at 10 o'clock, to dispense breakfast, without saying one word of their matutinary avocations; so that you might have been a visitor at the house without finding out that the Duke and Duchess has transacted the necessary business of the day-before, perhaps, you had risen.

I rather mention those that are gone to their reward, than write of women still amongst us: but you may believe me when I say that I am constanty among those who live lives of energy and usefulness-but they so employ themselves withcut ostentation, or an idea that they are doing more than their simple duty.

A Mirage.

A late Londonderry (Ireland) Standard contains

This singular phenomenon (a Mirage) was witnessed on Sunday evening week in this neighborhood. A gentleman was returning from Carndonagh, with his family, and the party had just dismounted off the car to walk the hill near Quigley's point, when their attention was attracted by a wonderful appearance in the heavens. Away to the north they saw several ships in the air, sailing across the face of the sky from east to west. The line of vessels seemed to be fully five miles in length, and they appeared to be sailing down a river whose high bank could be made out behind the ships. Some of the vessels seemed to be moored close to a fortress, built on a rock. To all the party was the phenomenon distinctly visible. So clear was the air, and so close did the ships appear to their eyes, that the sailors coast. The "mirage," as it is termed, often displays itself in fantastic shapes on the shores of the northern counties. It is most frequently to be seen on the coast of Antrim, especially in the vicinity of the Causeway. About twelve years ago a very curious instance of mirage was seen in Lough Foyle. Some fishermen had been out at night with their nets. The face of the heavens was overcast and black, when the clouds suddenly parted, leaving a bright gap of clear sky in the zenith. Across this space the astonished fishermen saw some thousands of soldiers pass, rank after rank, and regiment after regiment, and so near did the the phenomenon appear that the dress of the officers could be easily distinguished from that of the men. It was two hours before the marehing ceased or rather before the clouds closed in, and shut out the scence from view. An account of this extraordinary occurrence was published at the time.
